2023 SCHEDULE OF RATES

Classification units

Notice

The information provided in this document has no legal value. The official reference documents are the Act respecting industrial accidents and occupational diseases (CQLR, chapter A-3.001) and the Regulation respecting financing (CQLR, chapter A-3.001, r. 7).

The Schedule of Rates contains only the titles of classification units. However, the Regulation details the activities covered by the classification units. For more information, consult the Regulation respecting financing, published in the Gazette officielle du Québec.

Under certain criteria, an employer classified in a unit marked with an asterisk (*) may also be classified in an exceptional unit.

Employers' classification

In matters of occupational health and safety, the classification of an employer in one or more units is based on the nature of all the activities it carries out. This classification is made on the basis of the information that the employer provides the CNESST in that respect.

To reflect the specific risks of a business as accurately as possible, the CNESST takes into account only the activities that the business actually carries on. Outsourced activities are not taken into account for classification purposes.

For example, a clothing manufacturer that manufactures, stores, transports and sells its products will be classified under unit 17030 (clothing manufacturer; shoe manufacturer; shoemaker operation; leather or leather imitation items manufacturer), because all these activities contribute to clothing manufacturing.

However, if the manufacturing is done by a subcontractor, the employer will be classified under unit 54040 (clothing or clothing accessories business; shoe business; luggage or leather goods business).

Moreover, an employer may be classified in more than one unit if it carries on various activities that are of a different nature; this means that an employer that carries on two activities at once, that is, the operation of a restaurant and a convenience store, will be assigned two classification units.

Lastly, though some of an employer's activities, considered alone, might suggest classification in more than one unit, if these are support activities performed for the employer's own purposes, classification will be in a single unit only. Such activities would not be considered activities of a different nature.

For example, the delivery of a product manufactured by an employer, because it is an activity supporting manufacturing, will be included in the unit that corresponds to the manufacture of that product. However, if the employer also makes deliveries for other businesses, it will also be classified in the unit that corresponds to such transportation, because making deliveries is then its secondary activity.

Unit rate

To determine the premium rate corresponding to a particular unit, the ratemaking process involves two steps: establishing the average rate, and calculating unit rates.

The average premium rate for 2023 is $1.50 for every $100 of payroll.

The general unit rate is determined by taking into consideration the corresponding risk index for each unit. The index is obtained by comparing the experience data of a particular unit with that of all units. The unit rate is then calculated by multiplying this risk index by the average rate.

However, the CNESST sets different rates for enterprises whose activities come under federal jurisdiction. Their individual rates are lower because they are not subject to certain provisions of the Act respecting occupational health and safety. Therefore, those rates do not take into account the costs of prevention plans and the For a safe maternity experience program.

Joint sector-based associations

With the exception of the construction sector, where they are mandatory under the Act respecting occupational health and safety, joint sector-based associations are created on a voluntary basis by employer and worker associations in the same activity sector. Joint sector-based associations are governed by joint boards of directors and financed by a specific assessment paid by the employers in the activity sectors for which such an association was formed. Therefore, a joint sector-based association assessment is added to the premium of these employers. This rate varies from $0.022 to $0.080 for every $100 of insurable payroll in 2023.
